Pixel Magic Adds New Features to the Lumin Audiophile Network Music Player

Chicago, Illinois. April. 23, 2014. For the first time at AXpona 2014, Pixel Magic Systems, Ltd, parent company of The Lumin Audiophile Network Music Player, and Source Systems, Ltd, Lumin's USA importer, demonstrated HRA streaming from USB hard drives, flash memory, laptop, Internet radio and network attached storage (NAS). With the Lumin application running on an iPad for selection and control, in the AXpona demonstrations, the Lumin supports 5 sources for HRA and conventional digital audio playback. Additional sources may also be added to the Wi-Fi and Ethernet based system, making storage and playback options virtually unlimited. Demonstrations are ongoing in Room 315 at the Westin O'Hare. From mainstream formats FLAC and Apple Lossless (ALAC), through native DSD (supporting DoP), up to the highest resolution PCM 384 kHz, 32 bit audio masters (DXD/DFF), Lumin sets new standards for HRA streaming. The Lumin also supports Gapless Playback and On-device Playlists, UPnP and DLNA for maximum compatibility. The Lumin control function also accepts open source media control software.
